PREFACE

Another quarter has passed and the challenges remain constant. But what separates last quarter and this quarter is our persistence to acquire new information, learn new things and adapt to changing conditions.

Let us remain committed in our desire to hit our goals. It is true that learning is a never-ending process, and the belief that it ceases overtime is the beginning of the end.

Training and Business Development Group is proud to offer you this e-newsletter as a reminder that all efforts, no matter big or small, will never go wasted. Not everyone will take the journey, but you chose to thread down the road and maintain momentum. Keep it up!

Tips on Being an Effective Presenter

by John Penaflor | www.traininghacks.com

It's true that it's never easy to face a crowd for a presentation, nor, deliver a speech before an audience. But it's also true that everyone can be a good presenter.

The Art of Presentation-Making (+helpful sites to check out!)

by Karen Casalme | www.traininghacks.com

Imagine you are all set to meet a client. You can speak well and you are confident in what you're about to offer. There's only one problem.

Wash out the Burnout!

by Precious Reyes | www.traininghacks.com

Burnout is an exhaustion caused by prolonged or repeated stress. This may affect not only your physical well being but emotional and mental as well.

Active Now

According to one of the best-selling authors Rick Hanson,
"When you find your North Star, you know where you're heading to."

You know in your mind and in your heart your mission and you must try to accomplish it. Aiming towards it will bring more happiness for yourself and for others, too.

Even in selling, there will be challenges that we shall encounter and people who will not believe in us. We also have doubts in our own capabilities but if we embrace our greatness, anything is possible. Just follow your North Star!
